

Sara Rayment

Sara is the founder of Inkling, a consultancy that digitalises legal services. Having worked as a lawyer for over 10 years at King & Wood Malletsons and Sparke Helmore, Sara blends legal expertise with human-centred design principles to provide solutions for clients. She works with corporate and law firm clients on innovation projects including visual contracts, AI programs, applications, workflow automation, chatbots and digital transformation strategy.

Sara holds an LLM from Queen Mary College, University of London, in international arbitration. She is a Stanford d.school thinker and a Conjoint Associate Professor at the University of Newcastle. She co-founded the Legal Design & Innovation Project at UoN which conducts research into innovation and lawyers mindsets.

Sara was a delegate to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law where she participated in plenary sessions on the design on an Online Dispute Resolution for high volume cross border disputes.
